

Dispute your grain grade

When delivering grain to a primary elevator

Tell the primary elevator operator that you disagree with the grade or dockage assessed.

Ask the elevator operator to send a representative sample of your grain to the Canadian Grain Commission for a decision Subject to Inspector's Grade and Dockage.

The elevator operator will issue you an interim primary elevator receipt.

The elevator operator will send a 1000-gram representative sample of your grain to the nearest Canadian Grain Commission service centre.

A Canadian Grain Commission inspector will inspect the sample and determine the grade and dockage.

The Canadian Grain Commission will send a Submitted Sample Certificate with the results to both you and the primary elevator operator.

The elevator operator will exchange your interim primary elevator receipt for a primary elevator receipt, cash purchase ticket or cheque.

The Canadian Grain Commission will send an invoice for the cost of the service to the primary elevator, which must be paid by either you or the primary elevator.
